

MIS

MISCREATE. } adj. [mis and created.] Formed unnaturally or MISCREATED. } illegitimately; made as by a blunder of nature.

Then made he head against his enemies,
And Ymmer flew or Logris miserate. Fa. Q. b. ii.
Effoons he took that miserate fair,
And that false other sprite, on whom he spread
A seeming body of the subtle air. Spenser.

That you should fashion, wrest, or bow your reading;
With opening titles miserate, whose right
Suits not in native colours with the truth. Shakespeare.
MISDEED. n. f. [mis and deed.] Evil action.

O God,
If thou wilt be aveng'd on my misdeeds,
Yet execute thy wrath on me alone. Shakespeare. Rich. III.
Evils, which our own misdeeds have wrought. Milton.
Chas'd from a throne, abandon'd, and exil'd
For foul misdeeds, were punishments too mild. Dryden.

To MISDEEM. v. a. [mis and deem.] To judge ill of; to mistake.

All unweeting an enchanter bad
His sense abus'd, and made him to misdeem
My loyalty, not such as it did seem. Fairy Queen, b. i.
Besides, were we unchangeable in will,
And of a wit that nothing could misdeem;
Equal to God, whose wisdom thineth still
And never errs, we might ourselves esteem. Davies.

To MISDEMEAN. v. a. [mis and demean.] To behave ill.
From frailty
And want of wisdom, you, that best should teach us,
Have misdeem'd yourself. Shakespeare. Henry VIII.

MISDEMEANOR. n. f. [mis and demean.] Offence; ill behaviour; something less than an atrocious crime.

The house of commons have only power to censure the members of their own house, in point of election or misde- meanors, in or towards that house. Bacon.
It is no real disgrace to the church merely to lose her privileges, but to forfeit them by her fault or misdeemeanor. South.
These could never have touched the head, or stopped the source of these unhappy misdeemeanors, for which the punishment was sent. Woodward's Nat. Hist. p. ii.

MISDEVOTION. n. f. [mis and devotion.] Mistaken piety.
A place, where misdevotion frames
A thousand prayers to fancies, whose very names
The church knew not, heav'n knows not yet. Donne.

MISDIET. n. f. [mis and diet.] Improper food.
A drop through his flesh did flow,
Which by misdiet daily greater grew. Fairy Queen, b. i.

To MISDISTINGUISH. v. a. [mis and distinguish.] To make wrong distinctions.

If we imagine a difference where there is none, because we distinguish where we should not, it may not be denied that we misdistinguish. Hooker, b. iii.
To MISDO. v. a. [mis and do.] To do wrong; to commit a crime; to offend.

Afford me place to shew what recompence
T'wards thee I intend for what I have misdone. Milton.
To MISDO. v. n. To commit faults.

Try the erring soul
Not wilfully misdoing, but unaware Milled. Paradise Regain'd, b. i.

The worst is, to think ourselves safe so long as we keep our injuries from the knowledge of men, and out of our own view, without any awe of that all-seeing eye that observes all our misdoings. L'Estrange.

I have misdone, and I endure the smart,
Loth to acknowledge, but more loth to part. Dryden.
MISDOER. n. f. [mis and do.] An offender; a criminal; a malefactor.

Were they not contained in duty with a fear of law, which inflicteth sharp punishments to misdoers, no man should enjoy any thing. Spenser on Ireland.
To MISDOUBT. v. a. [mis and doubt.] To suspect of deceit or danger.

If the only misdoubted me, I were in heaven; for quickly I would bring sufficient assurance. Sidney, b. ii.
I do not misdoubt my wife, but I would be loth to turn them both together; a man may be too confident. Shakespeare.

The bird that hath been limed in a bush,
With trembling wings misdoubteth ev'ry bush;
And I, the hapless male to one sweet bird,
Have now the fatal object in my eye,
Where my poor young was lim'd, was caught, and kill'd.
Shakespeare's Henry VI. p. iii.

If you misdoubt me that I am not free,
I know not how I shall assure you farther. Shakespeare.
To believe his wiles my truth can move,
Is to misdoubt my reason or my love. Dryden.

MISDOUBT. n. f. [mis and doubt.]
1. Suspicion of crime or danger.
He cannot so precisely weed this land,

MIS

As his misdoubts present occasion;
His foes are so enrooted with his friends,
That, plucking to unfix an enemy,
He doth unfasten so and shake a friend. Shakespeare. Henry IV.

2. Irresolution; hesitation.
York, steel thy fearful thoughts,
And change misdoubt to resolution. Shakespeare. Henry VI.
MISE. n. f. [French.] Issue. Law term.

To MISEMPLOY. v. a. [mis and employ.] To use to wrong purposes.

Their frugal fathers gains they miseemploy,
And turn to point and pearl, and ev'ry female toy. Dryd.
Some taking things upon trust, miseemploy their power by lazily enslaving their minds to the dictates of others. Lake.

That vain and foolish hope, which is miseemployed on temporal objects, produces many sorrows. Addison's Spect.
They grew dissolute and prophane; and by miseemploying the advantages which God had thrown into their lap, provoked him to withdraw them. Atterbury.

MISEMPLOYMENT. n. f. [mis and employment.] Improper application.
An improvident expence, and miseemployment of their time and faculties. Hale's Origin of Mankind.

MISER. n. f. [miser, Latin.]
1. A wretched person; one overwhelmed with calamity.
Do not disdain to carry with you the woful words of a miser now despairing; neither be afraid to appear before her, bearing the base title of the fender. Sidney, b. ii.

I wish that it may not prove some ominous foretoken of misfortune to have met with such a miser as I am. Sidney.
Fair son of Mars, that seek with warlike spoil
And great achievements, great yourself to make,
Vouchsafe to stay your speed for humble miser's sake. Fairy Queen, b. ii.

2. A wretch; a mean fellow.
Decrepit miser! base ignoble wretch!
I am defended of a gentler blood. Shakespeare. Henry VI.

3. A wretch covetous to extremity; one who in wealth makes himself miserable by the fear of poverty.
Though he be dearer to my soul than rest
To weary pilgrims, or to misers gold,
Rather than wrong Castilio I'd forget her. Orway's Orphan.

No silver fancies by dying misers giv'n,
Here brib'd the rage of ill-requited heav'n;
But such plain roofs as piety could raise,
And only vocal with the Maker's praise. Pope.

MISERABLE. adj. [miserable, French; miser, Latin.]
1. Unhappy; calamitous; wretched.
O nation miserable,
With an untitled tyrant, bloody scepter'd!
When shalt thou see thy wholesome days again? Shakespeare.

Most miserable is the desire that's glorious. Shakespeare.
What's more miserable than discontent? Shakespeare.
It is probable that there will be a future state, and then how miserable is the voluptuous unbeliever left in the lurch.
South's Sermons.

2. Wretchedly; worthlessly.
What hopes delude thee, miserable man? Dryden's Æn.
3. Miserable comforters are ye all. Job xvi. 2.

3. Miserable. n. f. [from miserable.] State of misery.
MISERABLY. adv. [from miserable.]
1. Unhappily; calamitously.

Of the five employed by him, two of them quarrell'd, one of which was slain, and the other hanged for it; the third drowned himself; the fourth, though rich, came to beg his bread; and the fifth was miserably stabbed to death. South.

2. Wretchedly; meanly.
As the love I bear you makes me thus invite you, so the same love makes me ashamed to bring you to a place, where you shall be to, not spoken by ceremony but by truth, miser- ably entertained. Sidney, b. ii.

3. Covetously.
MISERY. n. f. [miseria, Latin; miserere, French.]
1. Wretchedness; unhappiness.

My heart is drown'd with grief,
My body round engirt with miserie. Shakespeare. Henry VI.
Happiness, in its full extent, is the utmost pleasure we are capable of, and miserie the utmost pain. Lake.

2. Calamity; misfortune; cause of misery.
When we our betters see bearing our woes, Shakespeare.
We scarcely think our miseries our foes.
The gods from heav'n survey the fatal strife,
And mourn the miseries of human life. Dryden's Æn.

3. [From miser.] Covetousness; avarice. Not in use.
He look'd upon things precious, as they were
The common muck o' th' world: he covets less Than miserie itself would give. Shakespeare. Coriolanus.
In a fabric of forty thousand pounds charge, I with thirty pounds laid out before in an exact model; for a little miserie may easily breed some absurdity of greater charge. Wotton.

MISERABLE.

MISESTEEM. n. f. [mis and esteem.] Disregard; slight.
To MISFACTION. v. a. [mis and fashion.] To form wrong.

A thing in reason impossible, thorough their misfashioned preconceit, appeared unto them no less certain, than if nature had written it in the very foreheads of all the creatures of God. Hakewill on Providence.

To MISFORM. v. a. [mis and form.] To put in an ill form.
His monstrous scalp down to his teeth it tore,
And that misformed shape misshap'd more. Spenser.

MISFORTUNE. n. f. [mis and fortune.] Calamity; ill luck;
want of good fortune.

Fortune thus 'gan say, misery and misfortune is all one,
And of misfortune, fortune hath only the gift. Sidney.
What world's delight, or joy of living speech,
Can heart so plung'd in sea of sorrows deep,
And heaped with so huge misfortunes reach? Fa. Q.

Consider why the change was wrought;
You'll find it his misfortune, not his fault. Addison.
To MISFORME. v. a. [mis and form.] To fill with doubt;
to deprive of confidence. It is used always with the reciprocal pronoun.

As Henry's late prefiguring prophecy
Did glad my heart with hope of this young Richmond;
So doth my heart misgive me in these conflicts. Shakespeare.
What may befall him, to his harm or ours?
This is strange! Who hath got the right Amie?
My heart misgives me. Shakespeare. Merry Wives of Windsor.

Yet oft his heart divine of something ill, Misgave him. Milton.
If a confidence thus qualified and informed, be not the measure by which a man may take a true estimate of his absolute, the finer is left in the plunge of infinite doubts, suspensions, and misgivings, both as to the measures of his present duty, and the final issues of his future reward.

His heart misgave him, that there were so many meeting-houses; but, upon communicating his suspicions, I soon made him easy. Addison's Freeholder, N^o. 47.
To MISGOVERN. v. a. [mis and govern.] To govern ill; to administer unskillfully.

Solyman charged him bitterly, that he had misgoverned the state, and inverted his treasures to his own private use.
Knutlet's Hist. of the Turks.

MISGOVERNED. adj. [from misgovern.] Rude; uncivilized.
Rude, misgovern'd hands, from window tops,
Threw dust and rubbish on king Richard's head. Shakespeare.

MISGOVERNANCE. n. f. [mis and governance.] Irregularity.
Thy muse too long slumbereth in forrowing,
Lulled asleep through love's misgovernance. Spenser's Past.

MISGOVERNMENT. n. f. [mis and government.]
1. Ill administration of public affairs.
Men lay the blame of those evils whereof they know not the ground, upon publick misgovernment. Raleigh's Essays.

2. Ill management.
Men are miserable, if their education hath been so undisciplined, as to leave them unfurnished of skill to spend their time; but most miserable, if such misgovernment and unskil-fulness make them fall into vicious company. Taylor.

3. Irregularity; inordinate behaviour.
There is not chastity enough in language
Without offence to utter them: thus, pretty lady,
I am sorry for thy much misgovernment. Shakespeare.

MISGUIDANCE. n. f. [mis and guidance.] False direction.
The Nicene council fixed the equinox the twenty-first of March for the finding out of Easter; which has caused the misguidance from the sun which we lie under in respect of Easter, and the moveable feasts. Holder on Time.

Whoever deceives a man, makes him ruin himself; and by causing an error in the great guide of his actions, his judgment, he causes an error in his choice, the misguidance of which must naturally engage him to his destruction. South.

To MISGUIDE. v. a. [mis and guide.] To direct ill; to lead the wrong way.
Hunting after arguments to make good one side of a question, and wholly to neglect those which favour the other, is wilfully to misguide the understanding; and is so far from giving truth its due value, that it wholly debases it. Locke.

Misguided prince! no longer urge thy fate,
Nor tempt the hero to unequal war.
Of all the causes which conspire to blind
Man's erring judgment, and misguide the mind,
What the weak head with strongest bias rules,
Is pride, the never-failing vice of fools. Pope.

MISHAP. n. f. [mis and hap.] Ill chance; ill luck; calamity.
To tell you what miserable mishaps fell to the young prince of Macedon his cousin, I should too much fill your ears with strange horrors. Sidney, b. ii.

Since we are thus far entered into the consideration of her mishaps, tell me, have there been any more such tempests wherein the hath thus wretchedly been wrecked. Spenser.

MIS

Sir knight, take to you wonted strength,
And master these mishaps with patient might. Fa. Q. uer.
Rome's readiest champions, repose you here,
Secure from worldly chances and mishaps. Shakespeare.

It cannot be
But that success attends him: if mishap,
Ere this he had return'd, with fury driv'n
By his avengers; since no place like this Can fit his punishment, or your revenge. Milton's P. Lost.

If the worst of all mishaps hath fallen,
Speak; for he could not die unlike himself. Denham.
MISHMASH. n. f. Ans. A low word. A mingle or hotchpotch.

To MISINFER. v. a. [mis and infer.] To infer wrong.
Nestorius teaching rightly, that God and man are distinct natures, did thereupon misinfer, that in Christ those natures can by no conjunction make one person. Hooker, b. v.

To MISINFORM. v. a. [mis and inform.] To deceive by false accounts.
Some belonged to a man of great dignity, and not as that wicked Simon had misinformed. 2 Mac. iii. 11.

By no means trust to your servants, who mislead you, or misinform you; the reproach will lie upon yourself. Bacon.
Bid her well beware,
Left by some fair-appearing good surpriz'd,
She dictate false; and misinform the will

To do what God expressly hath forbid. Milton's Par. Lost.
To MISINFORMATION. n. f. [from misinform.] False intelligence; false accounts.

Let not such be discouraged as deserve well, by misinfor- mation of others, perhaps out of envy or treachery. Bacon.
The vengeance of God, and the indignation of men, will join forces against an insulting benefactor, when backed with greatness, and set on by misinformation. South's Sermons.

To MISINTERPRET. v. a. [mis and interpret.] To explain to a wrong sense.
The gentle reader rests happy to hear the worthiest works misinterpreted, the clearest actions obscured, and the inno-centest life traduced. Benj. Johnson.

After all the care I have taken, there may be several passages misquoted and misinterpreted. Arbutnot on Coins.
To MISJOIN. v. a. [mis and join.] To join unfitly or improperly.

In reason's absence mimic fancy wakes
To imitate her; but misjoining shapes,
Wild work produces oft, and most in dreams;
Ill-matching words, and deeds, long past, or late. Milton.

Luther, more mistaking what he read,
Misjoins the sacred body with the bread. Dryden.
To MISJUDGE. v. a. [mis and judge.] To form false opinions;
to judge ill.

Where we misjudge the matter, a miscarriage draws pity after it; but when we are transported by pride, our ruin lies at our own door. L'Estrange.

You misjudge;
You see through love, and that deludes your sight;
As, what is straight, seems crooked through the water.
Dryden's All for Love.

By allowing himself in what is innocent, he breeds offence to his weak and misjudging neighbour. Atterbury's Sermons.
Infeniate!
Too long misjudging have I thought thee wise,
But sure relentless folly steals thy breast. Pope.

To MISLAY. v. a. [mis and lay.] To lay in a wrong place.
Mean time my worthy wife, our arms mislay'd,
And from beneath my head my sword convey'd. Dryden.

The fault is generally mislay'd upon nature; and there is often a complaint of want of parts, when the fault lies in want of a due improvement. Lake.
If the butler be the tell-tale, mislay a spoon, so as he may never find it. Swift's Rules to Servants.

MISLAYER. n. f. [from mislay.] One that puts in the wrong place.
The mislayer of a mere-stone is to blame: but the unjust judge is the capital remover of land-marks, when he defineth amiss of lands. Bacon's Essays.

To MISLEAD. v. a. [mis and lead.] To guide a wrong way;
to betray to mischief or mistake.
Take, oh take those lips away,
That so sweetly were forsworn;
And those eyes, the break of day,
Lights that do mislead the morn. Shakespeare.

Those we love,
That are misled upon your cousin's part. Shakespeare. Henry IV.
Poor misled men: your states are yet worthy pity.
If you would hear, and change your savage minds,
Leave to be mad. Benj. Johnson's Cataline.

Trust not to your servants who mislead or misinform you.
Bacon's Advice to Pilgrims.
O thievish
